actually, i believe we should mention the 15m windows number as it comes up in conversation. we don't need a press release, we don't need neon-sign fanfare. we can save that for october. BUT the question DOES come up in conversation with the press. We either answer it or evade ("more than 10 million") An evasion is interpreted as, "Hmm, you haven't updated those numbers since April Why not? Doesn't sound too good. Maybe that egghead story is true". By not answering the question something we've been quite open about in the past — we raise doubts.

we keep trying to put nails in the os/2 coffin, they keep pushing the lid up. We should hammer a few more nails in now and not let them get momenturm, we should not let doubts about windows momentum arise. momenturm. we should not let doubts about willoows inchest that hillset the 15m number is just one piece of ammo to be used with the others numbers we are have prepared (the "fact sheet" jefft is distributing today).

I am sorry I didnt see this mail before sending mine. Jon can go ahead and decide when we should use which numbers. I am not sure what is best. I just wanted to make sure there wasnt any religion about not using numbers.

I do NOT think we should update the Windows numbers at this time.
1. The OS/2 announcement can be attacked directly without our needing to hype the Windows numbers. No one has any doubt about Windows (total) sales.
2 We should care our part pronouncement on Windows volumes
2. We should save our next pronouncement on Windows volumes until we are ready with Windows for Workgroups (Oct 10 as planned) so we get the maximum benefit then.
