y-oemreq, could you provide a current list of OEMs who were shipped the Java supplement for XP? It would need to include the overrides we did.

Thx
Amy

They haven't signed their XP agreement – or at least it isn't at MSLI yet. Couple other big name OEMs are in this same boat and needed overrides.

random question...how come Gateway did not automatically receive the CD and an override request was needed?

Any OEM that is licensed directly by MS (or more accurately MSLI) for Windows XP receives the JVM as a supplement to the XP product license. There is no additional paperwork to sign on top of just the plain old, ordinary XP license agreement.

Hi Amy,

Can you clarify which of the following is correct?

If an OEM has the XP license signed, they will automatically be shipped the JVM supplemental (or we can get them one manually)....and that there is no JVM addendum/license to be signed.

or....

Only if an OEM has an XP license signed and a JVM addendum/license signed will the OEM receive the JVM Supplemental.

Thanks,
Jeff

Hi John- not sure...Jeff is going to touch base with Amy Bartlow to get definitive answer. I just found out earlier this morning that Gateway had not received the Java VM CD and the Account Managers needed to do an override request to MSI to get one to them.

Jeff...we should all sync with our account managers before sending this out. In order for OEMs to receive the JavaVM supplemental CD, they needed to sign a special license agreement.

Hi all,

John needs to know which OEMs he can publicly say will commit to ship our JVM. We also need to know which OEMs either won't ship our JVM and/or will ship a competitor's JVM. Our executives are going to want these data points.

Please coordinate getting the information that John is looking for by Friday 8/17. We should ask the following:

1. Is the OEM that going to redistribute our JVM?
2. Is there anything that we can do to facilitate this?
2. If not, are they going to redistribute a third party JVM?

-----Sample Email-----

Dear OEM,

We recently shipped the JVM Supplemental CD to you for XP preinstallation of Microsoft's Java Virtual Machine. We would like to follow up with you on this and provide help where needed: To do this, can you please provide answers & feedback to the following questions by this Friday, 8/17.

MS-DEPEX 005592

1. Are you preinstalling and distributing the Microsoft JVM? If so, can we say this publicly?

2. Is there anything that we can do to facilitate this?

3. If not planning on distributing the Microsoft JVM, are you planning on not distributing a JVM at all or will you be redistributing a 3rd party JVM.

Your help is much appreciated,
Thanks,
OEM Program Manager
